Code Enforcement Information

by Norman Glassman

Hello Neighbors, I read with great interest Beth Damon's excellent and needed article last month about what is essentially selective and abusive enforcement of the Atlanta Housing Code, which sets out the rules that apply to all of us who live in the City of Atlanta. Reading about the selective interest the City has taken in some of the older houses has inspired me to write this article

I have been in the neighborhood for 40+ years as owner of an unusual property just down the hill and through the valley from the Land Trust. Many folks walk through our field as a scenic shortcut to and from the Land Trust; this has been happening for decades and is fine with us. Occasionally we get a visit from a City inspector, probably because someone who walked through our land felt it was not up to his or her idea of proper landscaping, but since complaints are made anonymously I have no way to know, except to read what is on the occasional citation.

About 2 years ago I got a citation for "junk, trash, debris" delivered by a new officer on behalf of a more senior officer. The new officer, ap-

Our staff not only assists our participants in their daily activities, they teach life skills, develop relationships with them, and accompany them into the community for social. cultural, educational, volunteer, and employment opportunities. Some of our participants have jobs at companies such as Home Depot, Delta, Panera, Publix, and Salon Red. We strive to find a perfect job to match the job seeker's interests and goals, then we provide job support once employment has been secured. Most importantly, we work to transform lives by nurturing independence, self-advocacy, and empowerment.

Would you like to get involved in our mission? We are always looking for organizations to host community outings. We love visiting work sites, museums and galleries, or public parks for community games. We are also open to new volunteer and employment opportunities.

Another great way to get involved is on GA Gives Day/Giving Tuesday, November 28. We can't do what we do—which includes maintaining Frazer Forest and the Cator Woolford Gardens—without support from individual donors. You can even pre-schedule your donation for the 28th, so you don't have to worry about forgetting. Please visit www.gagives.org/c/GGD/a/frazer-center to donate.

For more information about the Frazer Center, or if you have an employment or community outing suggestion, please email me at communications@frazercenter.org.

The Garden November into December

by Elizabeth Knowlton

The lights went down, and the screen came into focus as Fergus Garrett's lecture at the Atlanta Botanical Garden began on October 4. Once looking more like a cheery elf than Christopher Lloyd's head gardener at Great Dixter, the famous 20th century garden in southern England, Fergus has matured amazingly well, still handsome with receding hairline and a suit as his voice rang out authoritatively in Day Hall. Of course we were entranced by the beautiful colors and exquisite foliage in the pictures we were seeing, much of it impossible to duplicate here with our extreme temperatures and great variation in rainfall. However, what Garrett was actually saying while the slides flashed by is that we should not be afraid of experimenting to see what works best for us. (He had consistent praise for our own botanical garden.)

For instance, he eschews a lot of mulching because it prevents selfseeding. Correct. He allows plants to grow where they may sprout and counts on close plantings to suppress weeds. However, we need mulch to keep soil from compacting under storms, to cover soaker hoses, and to conserve water. Too close planting leads to disease in our humid gardens. Garrett let us in on an important caveat that some may have missed: when he allows self-seeding, he removes 99 of every 100 seedlings that germinate. Experience will lead to your recognizing a tiny plant before you weed and mulch. I have a new appreciation for self-seeding ever since I began growing the annual salvia 'Summer Jewel' series, and this year I also got a return with zinnia 'Profusion White.' An enormous tomatillo appeared among the vegetables but unfortunately had no companion to pollinate the hundreds of flowers. The bees enjoyed it though.

When I got home from the lecture, I hauled out all my Christopher Lloyd (d. 2006) books and enjoyed again his transition from pastel cottage gardening to pots of gigantic tropicals in scarlet and chartreuse. Recently Garrett, now in full charge, has been increasing the number of tulips in the perennial beds, which reminds me that now should be spring bulb planting time. I say "should" because, I will confess, only half of my 600 tulip bulbs planted last Novem-Cont. on p. 7 parently using his eyes and common sense, looked around and told me he thought the citation was a mistake because he saw no junk, trash, and debris. He wrote down the contact info for the senior officer and told me to call him so the citation could be erased. After numerous attempts to contact the senior officer, with no reply, I had to obey the citation which told me "you are commanded" to appear in Court to answer this citation.

So I appeared in Court, plead not guilty, and after several months appeared for the trial, in which I acted as my own lawyer. When the senior officer, who had written the ticket, was on the witness stand under oath, I asked him why he did not answer the 3 emails and 2 text messages that I had sent him. After a pause of about 10 seconds, he replied "I don't know." He also could not point out any offending items in the photo I provided of my yard taken the day I received the citation. I also pointed out to the Judge, who was very fair, that my land is not visible from the street or neighbors' houses because of topography and landscaping. The Prosecutor dropped the case (it was totally bogus from the start), and Justice prevailed. But only because I had the time and inclination to assert my rights against improper City enforcement.

Now the important part: As part of doing my research to prepare for Court, I discovered (thank to the Internet) what my rights were. And it became apparent that the City inspectors were violating my rights and were not obeying the laws concerning enforcement. This seems to be happening to other folks in Lake Claire, as Beth Damon's article points out. So, dear neighbors, here is a short guide to learning what your rights are under the law:

First stop: Municode, the free online compendium of all the Codes for the City of Atlanta (and all other cities and towns in America!). Google "Municode" and follow the prompts to the Atlanta codes. Scroll down to Atlanta Housing Code, and read the enforcement section. Be aware that many of the Code folks have not read the enforcement section and have been unaware of what the Law says is proper enforcement procedure. Do not believe what anyone, including me, tells you concerning the Law. Believe only the written Law as provided by Municode. Much useful info is contained in the definitions sections.

A City inspector cannot come onto your property (past the front entry point) without your permission or a court order (search warrant), showing probable cause. Any City person who violates this is trespassing. I checked this with help from our excellent Councilperson Natalyn Archibong, who had the City Attorney verify in writing that we are indeed protected by the 4th Amendment. Speaking of Natalyn Archibong, we are fortunate to have her as our Councilperson. She was genuinely helpful, and I felt that she was my ally in dealing with the City. Municode helps you know the law, and Natalyn Archibong and other city officials help navigate the bureaucracy and push back when you are treated unfairly. Perhaps someone on the LCN Board could also be a contact person that could be called in to help if a Neighbor thinks the City is being inappropriate. And what a great niche for a lawyer who lives in Lake Claire, who could be called, and maybe hired, for advice and help.

And remember, when a City inspector comes to your property, that you have helped put the badge on his/her chest, and you help pay the salary of each City employee; they actually work for you. And they must follow the Law as they do their job of enforcing the Codes.

You may also donate online and know you are supporting our efforts to create a lasting beautiful space and our two honey bee colonies located at the Land Trust."

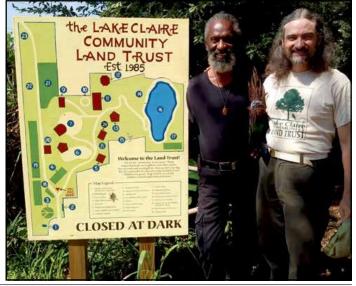

"Chilinardo"

Most folks in Lake Claire are aware of Chilinardo, the chili cookoff that the Leonardo residents ("Leos") celebrate annually. This year's party took place Saturday, Oct. 21. The winners of the contest (see picture) were Alyssa and Peter Olson (Navin pictured in Peter's arms) for Best Chili; Jennifer Clark, winner of Best Side and Best Cocktail; and Sue McAvov for Best Dessert. See the cool prizes in their arms (and on Navin's head). Boyd Baker reported that no emergency services were needed and there were no fistfights. About 50 Leos attended. They missed their neighbors and former neighbors ("alums") who couldn't make it.

Mapping the Territory

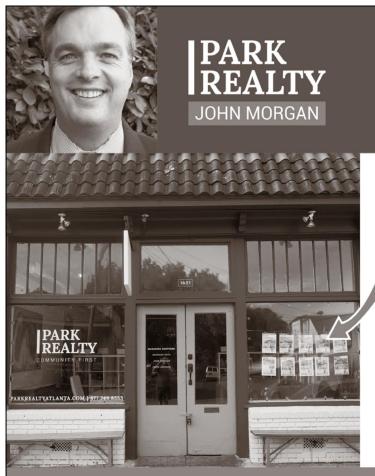

A year-long community effort finally came to fruition at the Land Trust. Based on Ray Pague's digitally drawn map of the 1.7-acre greenspace, signpainter Ralph Frank created a colorful 3' x 4' version on plywood. Stephen Wing designed the map legend and other text at the bottom, which was printed and applied by Hal Lilly at UFO Graphics. Diirga Brough set the posts and mounted it on the morning of July 29, just in time for Jerry Jam. Photo shows Stephen Wing with Robert Pue, who coordinates use of the Land Trust sauna. Thanks to everyone who helped! Coming next: a welcome sign for the Nelms corner footpath.

Mary Lin Elementary's Outdoor Classroom and Learning Garden

After what feels like a long, long, long time... the day finally came! Mary Lin's Outdoor Classroom and Learning Garden is finished! The ribbon cutting ceremony took place at the end of September. There was a great turnout, including APS Superintendent Meria Carstarphen, Associate Superintendent Yolanda Brown, Atlanta Board of Education members, plus many local candidates, and of course the school community. Mary Lin students will get experiential learning through the great outdoors, integrating curriculum across the subjects. What a wonderful way to show our community how their fundraising dollars are being spent in our own "backyard." Thank you for continuing to support the Mary Lin

Rocket Fuel Fund!

Thanks to four local business sponsors: Cynthia Baer Realty, Treehouse Milk, Wondershop, and The HomeTeam, and to Keller Knapp Realty for providing snacks, refreshments, and activities. DeKalb Emergency Management Tips After Irma Late November to early January is the most accident-prone time of year. Dekalb Emergency offers this advice.

Prepare your home and business for impacts from storm-force winds and rain. Know places to seek safe shelter. Bring in or secure outdoor furniture, trash cans, and things that blow around. Trim branches that may cause damage. Taping windows has no benefit. Prepare for loss of power for several days, including having water for family & pets Have non-perishable food that doesn't require electricity to prepare. Do not use grills or other open flame indoors.

Have battery-powered lighting and extra batteries. Keep cell phones charged. Have a way to charge cell phones, either by battery or car charger. Ensure you have enough cash, as ATMs may be out of service during a power outage. Keep generators outside and away from windows, doors, vents. Generators emit invisible, odorless carbon monoxide gas. Do not attach the generator to your house unless a generator switch has been installed by an electrician for this purpose.

In the case of power outage, call Georgia Power, 1-888-891-0938 (not 911, unless a true emergency). Sign up for DeKalb County CodeRED at www.dekalbcountyga.gov, to receive emergency information and severe weather warnings by phone call, text, or email.

The DeKalb County non-emergency number is 404-294-2911. For the latest information on weather and traffic conditions, visit 511ga.org.

Gardening in Lake Claire

ber appeared in spring. Call it what you will, climate cannot be depended on anymore, not even in a general way, such as expecting tulips to bloom once. (I may need to resort to pre-cooling my bulbs from September until nearly December before planting, the way they do in South Georgia and Florida.) For those of you who are interested in only tulips that grow on their own, enjoy those dinky little species tulips or, better yet, how about plastic flowers, a piece of statuary, or a garden gnome?

However, there are many other bulbs that do well here, narcissus (daffodils, jonquils), for instance, that come in shades of yellow, white, and even coral with various sizes of trumpets, numbers of blossoms per stem, and amount of fragrance. These begin blooming in late January most years, but before them come snowdrops, snowflakes, and crocuses. Plant each bulb at a depth of three times its diameter, pointy side up. And make some attempt to hide crocus planting from squirrels, not spreading the edible feast out on the soil before digging holes. The smaller species crocus bloom earlier and are more squirrel resistant. Bulbs and corms live longer and even spread in well-drained situations that get plenty of sun before trees leaf out so that bulbs can imbibe the nourishment, moisture, and sunshine needed for next year's flowering. If they are truly perennial, then by all means feed them in spring and fall. Once they have bloomed and their foliage has been allowed to die away naturally, they can exist happily underground in quite shady spots.

Warmer weather allows more vegetable gardening. Check your locations because even if it is warm, sunlight is more vital. There is no reason you cannot bring brassicas and greens through one of our winters under floating garden fabric, plastic tunnels, or a cold frame if they get enough sunlight. Protection can be as simple as straw bales covered with an old window frame or some bedspreads over hoops just when frost is about to strike. It is not too late for a last planting of spinach. And this is an ideal time to plant another kind of bulb, garlic, something I am doing for the first time this year. Because it has been dry, despite two hurricanes, be sure to water well after setting each clove two inches deep, six inches apart, pointy end upright. If my tulips fail to appear in 2018, at least I can eat garlic.

We hope this series is fun and a way for young Clarion readers/writers/ artists to participate.

This month we feature Sara McGill, who is 12 years old and in the 7th grade at Atlanta Neighborhood Charter School (ANCS). Sara's hobbies include rock climbing, ultimate Frisbee, jewelry-making, reading, gardening, and (obviously, as evidenced by this) she is a good writer. Sort of a Renaissance girl. Sara has also helped to distribute the Clarion for many years and been a great volunteer in many neighborhood efforts. Thanks, Sara, for your volunteerism and for sharing your talents.

Hey there, Lake Claire kids of all ages—we want to see your creativity. Write about anything that grabs you. Submit articles, poetry, drawings, etc., to editor@lakeclaire.org. We hope to hear from you!

Making Food for the Clifton Sanctuary

by Sara McGill

In Girl Scout troop 13553, we do many things. We roller skate, we have mystery dinner parties, but most of the things we do fall under the work of badges. Badges are mainly 3/4 part adventure, and they focus on one topic in particular. We've done a dancing badge, a first aid badge, an entrepreneur badge.

This year we (Girl Scout Cadet Troop 13553), have decided on focusing on the cooking badge, which guides us through cooking different things, with a little help from our awesome troop leader, Cecily Stevens. In order to earn this badge, we are cooking many things, but most importantly, we are going to cook a meal for Clifton Sanctuary Ministries (CSM), which is one of the oldest Men's Shelters in Atlanta, and here in our very own Lake Claire. We have decided on making a dish from another region of the United States, but we are still unsure what exact dish we are going to make.

We are so excited to make and present this meal to the men's shelter, and we hope that everyone has a good time and benefits from this badge.

NEW CONTEST!

November is diversity month; find the hidden November graphic in this Clarion. The winner/winners will have their pictures in the next Clarion.
